

The GENESIS

DEVELOPMENT PROJECT

2018 OVERVIEW

The GENESIS

Community Development Project

Project Overview:

The Genesis project partners with the blockchain along with utilizing financial service tools such as eWallet to stimulate the agricultural component of the Caribbean economy to lower food to table production costs, while supplying local jobs, creating a viable profit opportunity through export, improving quality of food, providing financial management tools, quality insurance and in turn fueling positive economic growth. Today between TFPC and the AACARRI group these organization represent over 500,000 farmers and their families stretched across 15 counties. CNET's products and services will act as A vehicle that the Farmers and their families and employees will use to help make their daily lives less stressful.

We aim to harness the ecosystem that derive from an international farmers network throughout the Caribbean, South America, Africa and beyond.

In our aim to do so, CNET has team up with several organizations such as NEWT in efforts to provide a platform that makes life easier and more efficient for Farmers, Financiers, Distributors, Buyers and Traders in this industry to facilitate transactions, for products available today and in the future.

Throughout Africa and the Caribbean, there's tremendous potential for future growth in the areas of agriculture, renewable energy, affordable housing, improved water harvesting mechanisms, improved waste management, and improved education and job training. We intends to revolutionize the Island nation's agriculture sector and help boost the economy by employing new, modernized, farming techniques and taking advantage of present day technology.
